LEARNING OBJECTIVES

1. Participants will be able to describe and discuss how clinical intuition fills the gap between theory and minute-to-minute practice.
2. Participants will be able to contrast right-brain intuition with left-brain deliberation in terms of implicit, bottom-up, emergent, holistic processes versus explicit, top-down, conscious analyses.
3. Participants will be able to examine evolutionary and developmental contexts in which intuitive processes arise.
4. Participants will be introduced and gain understanding of a play model of psychotherapy where creativity, improvisation, curiosity and exploration complement a rupture and repair approach to psychological healing and growth.
